

The excitement continues with our football dogs having their day until it seems all energy is drained from my body. The final straw came minutes earlier when the player from the opposing team got a little too close to our sideline and I snapped at him without really thinking. Ever since the Auburn game of a few seasons ago, I find myself jumping at opportunities to actively participate as they become available.